

Polymer-based solid-state electrolytes with excellent processability and flexibility are ideal candidates for commercialisation in lithium-metal batteries. However, the current ...