

What is the new regulation for hybrid power plants in Brazil?

From pv magazine Brazil newsletter The Brazilian energy regulator - Aneel - approved, last Tuesday, a new regulation for the operation of hybrid power plants. Resolution 954/2021 defines what hybrid projects are and establishes the rules for permitting and contracting the use of transmission systems.

How much electricity can a hybrid water system generate in Brazil?

It shows that using 1% of surface areas in artificial water bodies in Brazil can generate 57,384 GWh/year, reaching up to 5 times the generation capacity, as indicated by more recent studies. Moreover, analyzing data for one-day hourly generation considering a hybrid system would result in an increase of approximately 4% in electricity generation.

Should Brazil regulate wind-solar plants?

The regulation may be particularly favorable for hybrid wind-solar plants, especially in North-Eastern Brazil, where the grid is not strong enough to support further renewable energy development. Are hydro-photovoltaic systems a good investment for Brazil?

Hydro-photovoltaic systems can also represent an increase in the reliability and availability of hydraulic reserves for Brazil, with a reduction in the flow of reservoirs in times of lack of rain, which is consequently linked to the greater availability of solar resources.

Is there a wind-solar project in Brazil?

Prior to Aneel's new resolution, some pilot, hybrid wind-solar projects were undertaken in Brazil. One of these is a 68.7 MWac facility planned to be installed on a plot next to the existing 205.9 MW Ventos do Piauí; a wind farm, by the energy division of the Brazilian multinational Votorantim: Votorantim Energia.
