

Modern architects, already partial to steel, found that ribbons of single-light casements matched their industrial aesthetic. The adaptability of steel casements also extended to a variety of ...